How to give a gift of play

A coupon is a promise to play: time together, not a thing to buy. It takes about 2 minutes to set up and works as a gift on its own or tucked in with another gift.

1 • Pick

Choose 3–6 coupons that suit your child's age. Each shows a starting age. Fill in a blank one with a play your family already loves.

2 • Wrap

Cut them out, add the coupon-book cover and staple the stack at the left edge. Or fold the whole page like a letter.

3 • Reveal

Use the fold card or a reveal card to say what's inside. Your child hands you a coupon when they want to play it.

Talk while you play

Pause and wait

Say a little, then stop. A look, a sound or a wiggle is an answer.
"Ready, set... (wait) roll!"

Say what you see

Put words to what your child is doing, right as it happens.
"Big bubble... POP!"

Offer a choice

Hold up two things and wait. Pointing counts as an answer.
"Left or right?"

Most children love 2–3 of these and ask for them again and again. Say yes as often as you can, and let the rest wait. Talk, sing and read in the language you know best. A sign, a point or a device tap counts as communicating.

Why coupons?

Young children learn in back-and-forth moments with the people who love them. A coupon puts one of those moments on the calendar. It adds play; it never takes anything away.

A few house rules

Coupons never expire and are never taken back. They are never traded for screen time or sweets, and they are never a reward for good behavior. They are just for fun.
